A SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY ON URBAN HOUSING IN LATIN AMERICA

INTRODUCTION

The following bibliography was compiled during one semester of studies at the University of Illinois, as a contribution to the seminar course in Housing and Urban Policy Planning directed by Prof. Leonard F. Heumann in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning. I feel that while there are many books, articles and other publications regarding Latin American urban problems, most are in fields only indirectly related to the design profession, such as statistical analysis, sociology, anthropology, political science, etc. Housing in Latin America as an issue per se, has fewer references than expected, and these are usually in a scattered form: this is a very modest effort to bring some of it together.

The sources for this paper have been the bibliographical section of the "Suplemento Informativo" (after April 1968, called "Boletin Informativo") of the Interamerican Housing and Planning Centre, from the period 1960-1971; the Avery Memorial Architectural Library Catalog (second edition, 1968) and the Avery Index to Architectural Periodicals (main edition and six supplements, 1963-1972), plus many of the bibliographies listed herein. I have arbitrarily chosen the year 1960 as a starting point for all references: all selected sources have been published after this date. I believe that the rapid changes of information and events make older publications less relevant.

Due to time limitations, I have narrowed this compilation to urban housing, ignoring, except for a few basic titles, closely related issues such as urbanization patterns and urban design in Latin America, rural housing or general migration problems. On the other hand, there are quite a few references on marginal settlements, listed both separately and under each geographical subdivision. This phenomenon, known also as squatting, is only the logical consequence of the accelerated expansion in Latin America and the inability of almost all countries to provide adequate dwelling resources for the new populations, which, consequently, have taken the problem into their own hands. The words "villas miseria," "favelas," "cantegriles," "callampas," "barriadas," "shantytowns," and many others, denote, more or less, the same phenomenon.

2. CPL Exchange Bibliography #412

Statistical references have also been reduced mostly to those related to housing. From the technical point of view, I have included a list of publications on modular coordination and minimum standards aspects, plus a separate section on self-help and mutual aid housing. Other more general topics dealing with architecture in general or the building industry, or very specific issues such as tropical housing, sanitary or seismic requirements, home furnishings and equipment, have been also excluded.

As a final word, I wish to thank Prof. Heumann and Paul Iregams, visiting Professor in Architecture for providing the incentive for this paper and Mrs. Mary Vance, head of the City Planning and Landscape Architecture Library at the University of Illinois, for her valuable professional assistance.
